Tom sues city over son's fall

Albany is liable
day care accident

Teri DeLoeche
Journal

ALBANY — A Richmond man whose 9-year-old son suffered permanent hearing loss after falling and hitting his head on a railing at the Albany Daycare Center Memorial Park is suing the city for nearly $300,000.

Wendi Goodwin claims that workers at the city-run center were negligent in the December 1988 accident.

She alleges that her son, Jason Goodwin, was allowed to play unsupervised, that workers were inadequately trained and that "he was allowed to participate in activities not in accordance with the rules and regulations of (the) day care center."

This negligence directly resulted in permanent disability to the child. Consequently, he will require special education according to the law, which was filed Aug. 10 in Contra Costa County Superior Court.

The mother is seeking damages of over $40,000 in medical expenses. She is also asking for compensation for the child, claiming his injuries will affect his learning potential.

He suffered a skull fracture, a ruptured internal auditory canal, and injury to facial nerves.

City Attorney Robert Zweben said he had not read the suit and therefore was not sure of the extent of the city's liability.

"It was an unfortunate accident," he said. "At this point, we will litigate and examine expenses."

Zweben said the city is self-insured and if the suit is successful, the city will have to do some "belt-tightening" to pay the damages.

City supports geriatric clinic

By Reed Malcolm
The Journal

EL CERRITO — Possible construction of a West County geriatric clinic in El Cerrito by 1992 is looking likely now that City Council members unanimously voted Aug. 21 to support a County Health Department proposal for a new clinic on San Pablo Avenue.

The clinic could be located between Wall and Knott avenues — an area designated by the city for redevelopment and now occupied by the Bay Bridge Motel and the Silver Dollar Restaurant.

The IBEX Group, which plans to build stores and more than 150 apartments on the site, has expressed willingness to reserve the ground floor of a planned senior citizens apartment project for the clinic. The County Health Department received a $61,000 elderly services grant from the state last June, and is hoping for the necessary matching funds from the county in order to proceed with clinic construction.

According to Judy Peck, director of Contra Costa Geriatric Services, the state requires that the grant money be used immediately.

Because the IBEX sight would not be available until 1991, the county would need to open a temporary clinic on Macdonald Avenue in Richmond until the San Pablo space is made available, or else face the possibility of losing the money completely.

Bowl owners say they'll keep looking to relocate

By Shirleen Holt

EL CERRITO — The city and the parent company of Golden Gate Lanes are continuing to negotiate despite an apparent impasse at a recent council meeting, said a spokesman for American Recreation Centers Inc.

Richard Kerr, real estate manager for the Sacramento-based company, said ARC hasn't abandoned its search for an appropriate site to relocate the bowling alley.

"We are very interested in cooperating with the city," he said.

Kerr said Monday he is going to suggest "one or two" possible sites in the city's redevelopment area that have not yet been considered. He would not say which sites those are.

The City Council, sitting as the Redevelopment Agency, rejected ARC's proposal to move the bowling alley from its existing site between Blake and Hill streets to Manila Avenue.

The move would have put the bowling alley in the middle of El Cerrito's commercial district where Tradeway Furniture and City Hall now stand.

Councilmember Bob Bacon said it would be unwise to give up "prime property" to a bowling alley, which generates little sales tax. The city plans to reserve the site for housing and retail.

Both the city and ARC are having difficulty finding property

Officials said it would be unwise to give up prime property to a bowling alley which generates little sales tax with the right dimensions to fit a bowling alley.

Redevelopment chief Pat O'Keeffe recommended Golden Gate Lanes move to one of three available sites near Adachi Nursery at the north end of town. But ARC rejected those sites because they are too close to bowling alleys in San Pablo and they are "under the shadow of BART," according to Kerr.

Despite the disagreement between ARC and the city, Kerr said El Cerrito is not likely to lose its bowling alley. Putting the responsibility squarely on the city, he said an agreement can be reached "if we can get the staff and the (council) to work on it."

The bowling alley is slated for the bulldozer, along with Violet's Cathay Inn and El Cerrito Elms trailer park. Target Stores is negotiating with the city to develop the entire block.

Both Target and ARC had a shot at developing the area but the city chose Target because of the company's experience and the financial security of its parent company, Dayton-Hudson.

Community Day — no politics, please

El Cerrito Plaza officials discourage voter registration this year

Shirleen Holt
Journal

EL CERRITO — Bethel Temple said not links smothered in politics. The Purple Star offered toilet paper covers. Even the Baha'i faith passed out brochures at Saturday's Community Day at the El Cerrito Plaza.

But there wasn't a Republican, Democrat or Pat Paulsen button in sight. Meet the new controversy-free Community Day.

Every year local service organizations participate in the event, designed to give community clubs some exposure, recruit new members and make some extra money by selling thrift-shop merchandise. It also provides good PR for the Plaza, which offers the space.

Missing the last two years, however, are booths touting "Vote Democrat" or "Register Republican." Even non-partisan voter registration tables were nowhere to be seen this year.

Plaza officials want to keep it that way.

Applicants were informed this year that political groups, including even non-partisan voter registration organizers, would not be allowed. (Partisan groups were also banned last year.)

"We want to make it non-political," said Zenaida Garvey, marketing director. "We want to reserve it for the organizations that don't have access any other day of the year."

But banning political tables in shopping malls was declared illegal in 1980 after a landmark U.S. Supreme Court case declared that malls were public places.

Garvey told The Journal that political clubs are welcome "365 days a year" but that Community Day is "different."

"It's really for organizations like Boy Scouts, senior centers. A lot of people consider voter registration part of politics."

The Plaza's mixed message — political groups may be in the Plaza on Community Day, but they may not participate — has confused and angered local political groups, including the El Cerrito Democratic Club.

"What I don't understand is (that) the invitation includes all the religious groups, which have as much potential to be divisive," said club President John Dunn.

Local liberal activists claim the Plaza's new rule is aimed at them. "I think it's extremely bad public

Task just picking the task force

Teri DeLoeche

At the opening debate on the size of the new Solano Avenue Task Force is any indication of what's to come, don't hold your breath for quick results.

The City Council debated for nearly an hour Monday over whether the task force should have 15 or 18 members and how those members should be selected. Council asked for input from the audience and then after considerable discussion, decided that each council member should appoint three task force members.

Forming a balanced committee representing all viewpoints on the future development of Solano Avenue was the main topic.

The council agreed that committee members will be selected in three rounds so that a mix of the community could be achieved.

Non-residents could be appointed but the majority of committee members should be residents, the council decided.

Council members plan to make the appointments Sept. 9. The first task force report to the council should be Oct. 30. The finished report is due March 15.

According to Mayor Henry Kruse, the task force will take a "comprehensive look" at Solano Avenue and develop a consensus of recommendations to decide "what, if anything, should the city government do concerning the development of Solano Avenue."

The mayor also outlined the duties of the task force in a letter to fellow council members saying that "to the extent possible, the task force should set the basis for a 'vision' of Solano Avenue and propose community goals for Solano."

Solano Stroll

Revelers at last year's Albany event did more than stroll. This year, the same is expected for the popular Sunday street fair which begins at noon on Solano Avenue. A Pasta Fest kick-off is planned Saturday night at 6 p.m. at Royal Cafe.

A meander down Marin

NOWADAYS WALKING is, I notice, the exercise of choice of sports doctors and has captured the hearts and knees of former joggers. Blissfully ignorant of fads, we walkers always knew it was best mainly because we hate exercise without content. Mindless hopping around is not for us. We bring our brains back from a walk not merely fizzing with pure Albany oxygen but fresh with observations and thoughts about what goes on around town. We see who's who and ask them why. Now that's fun.

Come with me down Marin Avenue, that creek bed turned freeway, over on San Pablo to Solano and up. (I don't cross the street until I get to San Pablo because the light at Peralta doesn't give you time to get to the other side without being clipped in the rump by a Blazer going 45 and the light at Masonic never changes.)

WHAT? A LEMONADE STAND? There near the corner of Marin and Ventura sits the card table long favored by enterprising children on a hot summer day, but I see that this is the 1989 version.

Neighbor Tatum Tapscott is selling baseball cards, much more in his area of expertise than lemonade ever was or will be. Tatum is big in the Little League and an all-around athlete of great promise.

Entrepreneur Tapscott points out a player here and there from among the cards protected in plastic sheets. I ask him if he has my beloved Cleveland Indian, Bob Feller, or Say It Ain't So Joe Jackson. He just chuckles at my innocence.

I buy a Wade Boggs and a Bo Jackson for 50 cents each. I'll keep them in my safety deposit box.

A ragtop Morris Minor passes by, causing nostalgic thoughts of 1958 when I owned one. It's the generic car drawn by cartoonists and sounds like a sewing machine. They don't make cars like that anymore.

NEED HELP CALL POLICE says the accordion-pleated car shade in the front window of a green car parked on Marin. Isn't it clever of a store to give the shade to you with its message on one side and the distress call on the other? Your choice is to provide free advertising or call for help.

But does it work? The car has been parked there several days with its SOS side facing out. Nobody seems to be paying any attention to it. I look into the car for a hyperventilating person but don't see anything. Maybe there's a body in the trunk. Maybe the cops took a corpse away last week and forgot to turn the sign around.

BUSY, BUSY, BUSY San Pablo's taking the overflow from I-80 during the rush hours, urged on, you've heard, by radio traffic reporters. "If you're parked on the freeway, Highway 123 is moving fast," they say. The San Pablo Avenue Design Guideline and Improvement Committee has its work cut out for it.

The firehouse, I see, is getting a new red tile roof. Hurrying past Winchell's in case someone forces me to eat a cream-filled maple bar, I head toward Solano.

Hey, how come the library's open? It's only 1:15. I go in and ask the librarian at the information desk. "We started opening at 1:00 on

By Phyllis Lyon

Tuesday and Wednesday a couple of months ago," she said. "We just sort of sneaked it in." Other hours are still the same.

I browse around to see what's new, play with the computer a minute and stride on up Solano.

PASSING THE VENERABLE Zarri's, the oldest and most authentic Italian delicatessen in town, I see a sign in the window. It says consumers should be "warned about chemicals known to the State to cause cancer." It doesn't single Zarri's out as a malicious purveyor of these unnamed chemicals. It merely warns generally.

The sign makes me wish that the State would mind its own darned business once in a while. What good is it to throw undeserved suspicion on Zarri's mortadella and mozzarella? What's the point?

The lilies of the Nile, petunias and new grass under the BART tracks at Masonic are fresh and flourishing on the new hill. The Albany Rotary Club did a nice job but two bronze plaques with its name writ large seem rather immodest. It might have been prettier to hide one of their lights under a bushel.

PUFFING A LITTLE at about Flowerland, I come to the Safeway where last week Bob "Lucky Duck" Luoma won the 60-second shopping spree. During his minute of glory Bob dropped cans of coffee and frozen dinners into his basket to the tune of $135.

(Bob wasn't the only winner last week. Councilman Bill Lewis won a $25 door prize at the Solano Stroll kick-off party and promptly donated it to the mayor's library fund. The other $25 winner was a smudgy newspaper reporter who graciously did the same.)

If you still have the energy, you can continue on up to the east end of Solano which has lately taken lumps galore for being in Berkeley and for having parking meters. I turn here.

WALKING IN ALBANY isn't always sunshine and lollipops. Not long ago at the corner of Peralta and Marin, by the stoplight, I was mooned by a yuppie, or was it yupped by a moonie? I hear it's a new craze.

Natily attired in navy blue suit, old school tie, white shirt with neat beard and flashing executive eyes — I know all this because I stopped to watch him pull his pants up — he treated me to the sight of his bared posterior.

Worldly and sophisticated friends tell me it's an insult. I was insulted but guessed it's not the exposure that qualifies as indecent, so didn't bother the police.

EVEN SO I come back home so invigorated by the walk around Albany that I decide to go to Reno to see Frank Sinatra, who had a dog named Girlie and hung out at a bar called The Cat's Meow.

A 'money hungry' E.C. City Council

Editor:

At the Aug. 21 council meeting, your great City Council voted themselves a raise to $400 per month and $450 for the mayor. Their benefits run approximately $1,800 per month plus life insurance — hard to tell how much that is.

Only six cities in Contra Costa County, all larger than El Cerrito, receive as much as the El Cerrito City Council, but they are so money-hungry and self-serving they voted themselves this raise. Yet early in the year they voted to continue the assessment against El Cerrito residents.

At the same meeting Jack Runnion wanted to build an office complex on his own land with his own money. The council would not give him a permit because his property is in the redevelopment area. They want to make bigger parcels so they can give more of your money to big contractors.

Let the council tell us how much they have us in the hole, including interest they will be paying on money borrowed from these big contractors.

This will be known as the give-away council and it's our money they are giving away.

The people I have talked with do not want a Target store in El Cerrito and they want the bowling alley to remain where it is. Our council does not listen to the will of its citizens; they act as dictators. As citizens of El Cerrito we have no rights with this group.

We should elect three new council members in the November election and throw the other two out. They mentioned nothing of an assessment until after they were elected, then six months later we had an assessment.

Can we stand two more years of Bob Bacon and Jean Siri? They tell us how little money is coming in, but this money would have come in if they hadn't run the businesses out of El Cerrito.

How much have they put us in the hole?

I'm for redevelopment but as it was supposed to be when planned, not what the council is doing to it.

Phoenix at expense of playgroup?

Editor:

The El Cerrito Cooperative Playgroup has been operating the Nursery School of the El Cerrito Methodist Church for the last 30 years. This playgroup is a parent cooperative. The parents attend with their children on Tuesday and Thursday mornings between 9 and 11:30 a.m.

It has offered the opportunity for non-working mothers to provide their children with a preschool experience. Through the years the co-op playgroup has purchased numerous toys and a variety of play equipment.

This spring the Playgroup School was permitted to use the space with the El Cerrito Co-op Playgroup on temporary basis.

The Co-op Playgroup has been allowing the Phoenix School to use some of their equipment. Now it seems the Phoenix group plans to make this a permanent situation. Where does that leave the playgroup?

I do understand the position and needs of Phoenix and I sympathize with them, but not at the expense of the co-op. Due to possible state requirements, the El Cerrito Co-op Playgroup may be pushed out of this church space. I feel the public should know there is more to the Phoenix situation than has been stated. The El Cerrito Co-op Playgroup, a 30-year-old institution, is in danger of losing its facilities.

 "It's just insane," said Jean Siri. "The only thing I suspect is that it's [intended] the Democratic Club." The discouragement applies to Republicans as well, but fewer private groups are active in El Cerrito.
 A bipartisan voter registration banned this year because, they said, last year organizers did out literature "that had nothing to do with initiatives." The reasoning behind the rule — which they admit is unenforceable — has some people stumped.

"Maybe they feel it would be bad for business," Dunn said. "But El Cerrito always votes overwhelmingly Democratic in the national elections."

Some 40 service organizations participated on Saturday, and there was room for more. Ignoring the warning on the Community Day application, the West County Peace Committee managed to secure a spot.

The two women staffing the table said a Plaza official inspected their handouts Saturday and told them their petitions came close to being political.

Marge Bowman and Tuz Mende, volunteers with the committee, said their group does not do political or "anti-government" work. "We consider it educational," Bowman said.

The women said the Plaza's new rule only makes Community Day bland.

"There's not even a Central American group," Mende said.

Franklin Roosevelt entertained King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on the Potomac in 1939

From glittering yacht to dope-smuggling ship and back again

By Chris Treadway
The Journal

The U.S.S. Potomac will make a proud reentrance into San Francisco Bay Sept. 3 as the intended centerpiece of the first presidential memorial on the West Coast and the only memorial to date to the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Oakland homecoming of Roosevelt's "floating White House" will be marked by a morning boat parade, followed by a noontime welcoming ceremony at the Broadway pier on Jack London's Waterfront.

That evening there will be a gala dinner aboard the Liberty Ship U.S.S. Jeremiah O'Brien. Proceeds from the $150-a-person dinner will go to raise funds for the Potomac's restoration.

The historic boat should be considered "a lot like one would look on Monticello or Mt. Vernon," said James McCloud, president of the association for the presidential yacht Potomac.

The Potomac's triumphant homecoming and eventual installation at the already completed Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial Pier at the foot of Clay Street is a far cry from the ship's last voyage into the bay.

In 1980 the former presidential yacht was being used by smugglers as part of a plot to bring 40 tons of marijuana into the country. It was an ironic twist for a ship that began its career chasing run runners for the Coast Guard and was later used by the president to host the King and Queen of England.

Confiscated from the smugglers by the Customs Service, the ship was anchored at Treasure Island, where it sank after its hull was pierced by broken moorings.

The Potomac was raised by Navy divers, but appeared to have reached a sad end when an attempt by Customs to auction it in 1981 found only one serious bidder — the Port of Oakland, which bought it for a bargain basement price of $15,000.

Since then the volunteer organization now headed by McCloud has been seeing to the restoration of the Potomac and working on having it made an official memorial to Roosevelt.

Plans for the memorial include an interpretive center to tell of Roosevelt's life and the times he led the country through. The Board of Governors of the restoration group includes Frank Sinatra, Ralph Bellamy and Bob Hope.

The Potomac's backers, who include former National Park Service Director William Penn Mott, are trying to get financial help for the interpretive center from the National Park Service.

Funding for the ship's restoration, expected to cost about $3.2 million when all the work is through, is being raised privately. Initial estimates put the restoration cost at better than $5 million.

The restoration of the outer structure, now complete, was contracted at a Stockton shipyard.

The volunteer Potomac Association will do the remaining work, including electrical repairs, itself. The ship is expected to be finished by mid-1990.

McCloud, the retired former president of Kaiser Engineers and a native of Oakland, said his group is trying to replicate all the furnishings Roosevelt had on the boat so that it can receive National Landmark status.

In addition to being a memorial to the president who led America through the trials of the Great Depression and World War II, plans are for the boat to be an educational center for Bay Area students and anyone else interested in the life of Roosevelt.

The ship will be fully operational and will be taken on periodic trips to other Bay Area ports.

Tickets to ride aboard the Jeremiah O'Brien during the boat parade Sunday are available from BASS at $20 for adults and $7.50 for kids.

Boarding of the O'Brien will be from 7:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. at the Howard Terminal at the foot of Market Street. It will sail to the St. Francis Yacht Club where the parade of more than 50 vessels back to Oakland will begin.

The welcoming ceremony at Jack London's Waterfront is free and guests will include direct descendants of President Roosevelt.

Parking at the waterfront will be free all day in observance of the Potomac's homecoming.

Tickets for the gala fundraising dinner are available by calling 531-4479. The guest of honor at the dinner will be former Governor Edmund G. "Pat" Brown.

County issues across-the-board

Budget gentle to social welfare, health programs

By Chris Treadway
The Journal

OAKLAND — Health care and general welfare needs took priority in an otherwise slashed Alameda County budget passed by the Board of Supervisors last week.

The supervisors mandated cuts of 3 percent in all departments and used two-thirds of the county's emergency General Reserves fund to balance the $1.028 billion budget, which is up by 17 percent over last year. The cuts will generate $9.5 million in savings.

Money from the emergency reserve will go toward AIDS and homeless programs, additional staff at Highland Hospital and funding for senior centers and community-based primary and mental health organizations.

Funding of $1.02 million was provided for a Caesarean unit on the 9th floor at Highland Hospital. The new facility represents "an important part of the fight on infant mortality," said David Shiver, chief of staff for Supervisor Warren Widener.

Community primary health organizations and mental health groups that contract health services to the county will be provided with more than $1.1 million in funding, which will help them recruit and keep qualified staff and personnel.

AIDS prevention and client services funds were augmented by $1.075 million. The county AIDS Advisory Committee will set priorities for how the extra money will be applied, Shiver said.

The county also voted an additional $288,000 for family planning services, which represents the amount of funding withdrawn from the program by the state.

"The board had to vote to maintain services because we believe family planning is very important," Shiver said.

The supervisors' 5-0 vote to use part of the emergency reserves came over the recommendation of County Administrator Steve Szalay that the fund be retained. About $6.2 million of the $9.2 million fund was appropriated. Szalay had also recommended the 3 percent cut in all departments to balance the budget, which had a $49 million shortfall when first presented in June.

The county received $15 million more from the state than anticipated and carried over $29 million in available funds from last year's budget.

For its portion of the cuts the county probation department had recommended cutting funding to several community groups, including Bay Area Women Against Rape. The supervisors, however, instructed the department to restore funding to the groups and

Emergency Reserve Money to Fund:

- Caesarean unit at Highland Hospital; $1.02 million
- Primary/mental health groups, contract services; $1.1 million
- Augmentation for AIDS services; $1.075 million
- Family planning (what state would have paid) $288,000

find other areas to cut.

Supervisors blame many of the budget problems on the state, which requires that certain services be provided but places most of the financial burden for those services on the county.

"The picture is real bleak for next year, given the cost of living increase," said Shiver. "We may have to make more cutbacks. Without new revenue, next year could be bad news."

In other actions, the supervisors voted 4-1 to endorse a proposed state initiative that would increase taxes on alcoholic beverages in order to fund care programs. If passed, voters, the measure would generate an estimated million a year. Of that $700 million would go to Alameda County, with Alameda County receiving an estimated $34 million.

The initiative will go to the November 1990 ballot if it can gather one million signatures.

The proposal would tax at five cents a unit — 30 cents a six-pack of beer, 26 cents a fifth of wine, 30 cents on spirits.

Beer taxes, at four cents a gallon, have remained unchanged since 1959. Wine taxes have been unchanged since 1971 — they were reduced from cents to one cent per gallon.

Revenues from the tax would fund uncompensated health care, mental health programs, drug and alcohol and other programs.

Supervisor Ed Campbell, the lone dissenting vote, expressed concern about the impact the initiative would have on Alameda County's industry.

County offers reduced-price free meals to school children

Free and reduced price school meals are available to children unable to pay the full price of $1.60 for lunch and 80 cents for breakfast, according to the Contra Costa County Office of Education.

Students in Office of Education programs can get free meals if they live in households receiving food stamps or Aid to Families with Dependent Children. They can also receive meals at no cost or at the reduced price of 30 cents for breakfast and 40 cents for lunch if they live in households that meet federal income guidelines.

To qualify families must complete eligibility applications and meet program criteria. Application forms are being sent to parents or guardians. Additional forms are available at each school and at the county office, 7100 Barbara Rd., Pleasant Hill.

For information call program administrator Bianca Blum at 798-7466.

Students advised to apply for free meals

The Richmond School District is asking students who are eligible for free or reduced-price meals to complete and return application forms as soon as possible.

RUSD Food Services Director Heidi Camoronang said the quick return of forms will help her staff plan for the appropriate number of meals throughout the school year.

"We want to prepare meals for as many eligible students as possible because children who go hungry cannot learn," Camoronang said.

Food stamp and welfare recipients and families with limited income qualify for the federally-funded nutrition program. Application forms and a chart of family income eligibility are available at all school sites. In accordance with law each student will receive this form to take home to parents or guardians when school opens.

The law also assures applicants of confidential treatment, non-discrimination and the right to appeal eligibility decisions. The law also requires recipients to report decreases in family size and increases of more than $600 per year to household incomes.

Inquiries about participation in the food program should be made at schools.

Albany schools to begin Wednesday

The 1989/90 school year begins Sept. 6 at all Albany public schools. The district office and schools will be closed Labor Day.

Registration

Children who have not attended Albany elementary schools (grades kindergarten through the fifth) or the Albany Middle School (grades six through eight) previously should be registered at the appropriate school office as soon as possible.

School offices are open for registration between 8:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. Call the school before coming in to register: Cornell School 525-7873; Marin School 527-2033; Vista School 526-2191; Vista-MacGregor Primary School 524-9364; Albany Middle School 526-2882; Albany High School 525-7131.

Children of elementary age who live in University Village may register at the Albany Children's Center, 1140 Ninth St. Pupils living in University Village may be assigned to Marin School, Vista School, Vista-MacGregor Primary School or Cornell School depending on the enrollment at each school.

Children must be 5 years old by Dec. 2 to register as first graders. Proof of birth date must be presented for students in kindergarten and the first grade.

Oriental for all new Albany High School parents and students will be held Aug. 31 at 7 p.m. in the Little Theater. New pre-registered and continuing 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grade students should arrive before 8:30 a.m. Sept. 6 to check the homeroom lists that will be posted in the main hall.

Proof of residence in Albany will be required as a condition of registration at each school. Three types of verification, such as home ownership papers and utility bills, will be requested. Prices for lunches are $1.45 (Cornell, Marin and Vista schools) and $1.55 (Albany Middle School and Albany High School).

California requires all students to meet immunization regulations and the Albany Unified School District will not register students who have not met the law. The "no shots, no school" police prohibits a grace period and does not recognize a parent's signature as verification of immunization. These regulations pertain to all grade levels, kindergarten through high school.

Children who enter their first year of school this fall must present an up-to-date immunization record. Older children who transfer from school to school within California should already have immunization records on file. The requirement for a health provider's signature (rather than parent's) applies only to new students.

Low-cost immunizations are available at county health department clinics through the summer at the following locations:

Berkeley Health Department, 830 University Ave., Berkeley, Tuesdays 1 to 4 p.m. and Thursdays 2 to 4 p.m., maximum $10 per shot (644-8569).

Concord Health Department, 2355 Stanwell Circle, Concord, on the fourth Monday of each month from 3 to 6 p.m. (646-5260).

Oakland Central Health Clinic, 470 27th St., Oakland, Wednesdays 1 to 4 p.m., $10 per visit (271-4263).

Richmond Public Health Department, County Building, 39th and Bissell streets, Richmond, on the fourth Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each month from 2 to 4 p.m., $2 to $5 per shot (374-3101).

Immunizations cost $2 to $10 per shot. No appointment is necessary.

The required immunizations include five doses of diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis; four doses of oral polio vaccine; and one measles, mumps and rubella shot on or after the child's first birthday. The last dose of DTP and polio must have come after the child's second birthday, otherwise a booster shot is required.

Embattled Phoenix Preschool loses top administrator Latham

By Shirleen Holt

The Journal

EL CERRITO — Kathe Latham, director of the new Phoenix Preschool, quit last week because the struggling school is "too small to afford a full-time administrator," she told The Journal.

On Monday teacher Lorraine Weatherspoon took over the 4-month-old preschool which operates out of United Methodist Church on Stockton Street.

Latham and the parents of some 58 preschoolers opened Phoenix June 5 after a bitter split with the Yellow Brick Road School. That school was sold to new owners who wanted to turn it into a for-profit business. The policy disagreement led parents to boycott and eventually leave Yellow Brick Road.

"I'm going to take some time off and look (for a new job),"

Latham said. "After this experience I feel I'd like to do something a little different."

Latham's tenure at Phoenix was bumpy from the start. The school was operating without city permits or a state license and opponents took steps to shut it down.

City officials and the press received anonymous phone calls asking them to look into the school. Latham said a radical political letter she wrote 10 years earlier resurfaced and was being circulated.

The Planning Commission acknowledged that the school was illegal but it approved a permit on the condition that the school receive a state license. That license, issued by the Community Care Licensing Agency, is still pending.

Yellow Brick Road School owner Paul Borg and administrator Mary Beth Pallone are appealing the Planning Commission's decision at a meeting Sept. 6.

Borg recently purchased the school and turned it back into a non-profit organization.

or not the County Board of Supervisors will vote to approve the matching funds," Peck said.

Although supervisors have expressed interest in providing additional senior services, it is uncertain if the county can afford it.

Health Services Director Mark Finucane is in Sacramento looking into the possibility that funds from Proposition 99, the cigarette tax approved by voters in November, might enable the county to provide the matching funds, Peck said.

Supervisors will vote on the matter in mid-September.

More than 50 percent of West County's 28,831 senior citizens live in El Cerrito. For the past five years most have had to make the 56-mile round trip to Concord in order to receive services at the Older Adults Geriatric Clinic.

The new El Cerrito clinic would be ideal due to its proximity to neighboring Eskaton Hazel Shirley Manor, the new El Cerrito Royale, BART and AC Transit.

Twenty-five percent of the proposed IBEX apartments are already designated for low-income housing for senior citizens.

Peck said the El Cerrito Royale will be much like the Royale in Concord, housing mostly fragile and immobile elderly adults.

County health officials have spent the last six months investigating vacant and available space in El Cerrito for the Older Adults Clinic.

According to a letter sent to the mayor by Finucane, the few possible sights located had to be eliminated due to cost, size constraints, parking problems or accessibility problems.

Owner helps provide the magic ingredient at North African eatery

Good food, greater company at Ali's

Dining

Ali's, 385 Calusa Ave., Kensington; 526-1500. Hours daily from 5 p.m. Visa, MasterCard, American Express accepted. Reservations highly encouraged one day in advance. FOOD: ★★ ★★ ATMOSPHERE: ★★ ★★

Perhaps the best word to describe both the atmosphere and cuisine of Ali's is "eclectic." With some of this and a little of that from virtually every North African and Middle Eastern country, Ali's could properly be described as either a traditional North African restaurant with a strong Middle Eastern influence, or a traditional Middle Eastern restaurant with a pronounced North African accent.

How many different influences combine to create the unique feeling at Ali's? Well, the first thing you notice upon walking through Ali's door are a double of alluring paintings in the classic Egyptian mummy design.

Inside Ali's cavernous main dining room, which boasts 20-foot-high ceilings, you will observe a room divided.

On one side are the traditional low tables, cushions and stools you may be accustomed to from Moroccan and other North African restaurants. This space coexists with a more formal area of tables and chairs which looks very much like what you might expect to see if you were going out for a nice meal in, say, Damascus or Amman.

Then you receive Ali's wine list. You will notice that the restaurant features wines from Tunisia and Algeria, as well as from Lebanon.

Now look at the menu. If you are familiar with Middle Eastern and North African cuisine, you will observe that Ali's features foods from throughout that vast region from "a to z" — as in Arabic arnab, braised rabbit in paprika sauce ($15.50), to zaalouk, Moroccan pureed eggplant ($4.50), with representative offerings from just about every country in between.

Unlike other restaurants which vainly attempt to blend diverse cultures and cuisines into a homogeneous whole, Ali's succeeds admirably in capturing the feeling of a large and important part of two continents without trivializing the contribution of any one country in the process.

For example, Ali's serves a delightful bastilla, the traditional saffron-flavored chicken and

The East Bay's Best Ethnic Restaurants

By Richard and Linda Flamm

★★★★ Excellent ★★ Very Good ★★ Good ★ Fair

cracked almonds, then dusted with powdered sugar ($6.50 as an appetizer, $15 as an entree).

Also offered are merguez, spicy grilled lamb sausages (a traditional Tunisian appetizer, $4.75); a side order of Algerian couscous, a coarse and gritty grain most often associated with Algeria ($2); sambusek, a Middle Eastern cheese pie similar to the Indian samosa ($4.50); Lebanese fet-touche, romaine lettuce with feta cheese and tomatoes ($4.50); and even Saudi Arabian tangine, braised lamb with okra and tomato ($16.50).

If all this diversity isn't enough to either confound or delight you, on the night we last visited Ali's we learned that owners Ali and Teri Alyami had recently retained a new head chef, Antwan David from Iraq, and our waitress was from Kenya.

The front of all this diversity, as well as the fulcrum of the restaurant's activity, is Ali himself, who hails from Saudi Arabia. Alyami, an unlikely restaurateur by anyone's standards, holds a Ph.D. in philosophy and would just as soon discuss the meaning of life and how it should be lived as talk about his recipe for Saudi Arabian tangine.

Ali's wife and co-owner, Teri, an internist at Oakland's Kaiser hospital, spends a fair bit of time at the restaurant along with the couple's two young children. But it is Ali who supplies most of the energy which makes the restaurant go. On any given night you will see him making the rounds of his guests' tables, sitting down at each one, as if he and his guests are not casual acquaintances but, rather, longtime friends.

On one visit, we saw Ali bring smiles to the faces of one group of customers by regaling them with stories and treating them to free desserts and mint tea. When another group apologetically informed him they were "only there for drinks," he insisted on ushering them out of the bar and into the main dining room. "Come in, relax, enjoy the music," he said — as if business was the farthest thing from his mind and seeing to it that a group of his guests met with an enjoyable night under his roof, the closest.

The walls at Ali's are dominated by major paintings. Apart from those, however, the restaurant is decorated in a fairly spartan manner. Chandeliers and a small brown and white canopy provide the main objects of attention. That is, except on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights when some wonderful live North African entertainment is offered.

At many Moroccan restaurants, you are entertained by a belly dancer who will periodically interrupt your meal to wriggle and gyrate, sometimes beckoning you to dance, and always hoping you will press some greenbacks into her (or his) wildly gyrating hip pockets. While Ali's also features belly dancing, here entertainment is limited to brief performances which are truly the — more art than a method of arousal.

Neither Ali's cuisine nor the way it is presented are spectacular by North African or Middle Eastern standards. Of the seven entrees we sampled, the bastilla and shish kebab were excellent, but two chicken dishes — taouk, grilled fillet of chicken breast in lemon and spices — with green olives in saffron — were only fair. Further, meals are on the expensive side, with a la carte entrees ranging from $14 and up.

(After our visit, however, Ali told us he added a menu with lower prices.)

All this said, the thing that makes Ali's apart and makes it worth going to, is its vibrant owner's attitude toward life — which he insists on seeing to it that his guests enjoy too.

Richard Flamm, a Berkeley attorney, and his wife Linda have written travel and restaurant articles for national magazines and newspapers. Their first book, Guide to the Bay Area's Best Ethnic Restaurants, or How to Travel Around the World Without Leaving San Francisco is due out from Zorba Press this fall.

E.C. Chamber

By Del Wisenor

Light at the end of the tunnel

The median strip project is shaping up very well, compliments now overtaking the complaints. With all of the problems, including utility companies, bad weather, and other unforeseen delays, the merchants and residents of El Cerrito should be complimented for the patience shown.

One major complaint is the inability to turn left across San Pablo Avenue. It is hoped that when the signal system is operating, it will lessen the problem somehow. We know, of course, that Bob Dunn, public works director, has had some frustrating moments as well over this project and will be as pleased as the rest of us when this is complete.

We thank Bob also for seeing that the two trees on Potrero, blocking our city entry sign, have been removed. This has been longin coming and the action very much appreciated. Our development committee chair, Marv Collins, will be very pleased on his return from his vacation kup north, when he can see the fruits of his labor more visibly.

San Pablo Avenue is a state highway, we must remember, and many problems take more time to unravel because everything must go through Caltrans first.

Thank you, Kelvin

Due to Kelvin Marshall's transfer with PG&E from Richmond to Oakland, Sil Addiego, Locators Real Estate, has been appointed third vice president and Larry Newson, PG&E, will replace Kelvin on the board of directors for the remainder of the year.

Our sincere appreciation for Kelvin's service to our chamber and we look forward to working with Larry.

Thank to Sil, as well, a longtime member of our board of directors. Notice that chamber member Richard Rawlins has renamed his business, formerly Happy Steak, to Rawlin's Family Steak House. Richard and his wife are the proud new parents of a baby boy, Daniel Lee, born Aug. 11, weighing 9 pounds and 12 ounces. Their son, Robert, is 3. Congratulations to all of the Rawlinses.

Sizzler coming

We regret Carl's Jr. closure but look forward to the new Sizzler which will be opening in October. This will be an asset to our city, since they do an outstanding job in all their locations. Mario's in Del Norte Plaza has added a fine Italian restaurant to the establishment, nice dining area and excellent food.

Another change. When you go up Fairmount Avenue to Skein Lane of El Cerrito, look to the right instead of left and you will find Hoan Haggerty now at 7512 Fairmount. Lots of beautiful merchandise and holiday items can be found and we wish Joan lots of continued success in this new location.

Associate member The American Cancer Society is sponsoring the third annual Chardon-nay on the Bay, a wine and cheese event, Sept. 17 from 3 to 5:30 p.m. at Linsley Hall in Point Richmond. For tickets or information call the El Cerrito office at 525-6801.

In a move to expand business outside of the U.S., COLDWELL BANKER RESIDENTIAL REAL ESTATE SERVICES OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CITIBANK INTERNATIONAL ASIAN BANKING CENTER WEST COAST DIVISION have teamed up to launch a pilot program targeting foreign buyers interested in California real estate.

In a recent seminar at Coldwell Banker administrative headquarters in San Ramon, Bob Chang, Vice President of Citibank International Asian Banking Center in San Francisco, and Patty Dober, Vice President and Director of Relocation for Coldwell Banker Northwest Regional Operations, outlined the exclusive program to Coldwell Banker sales associates.

Chang explained, "Because of the skyrocketing cost of housing in countries like Japan, real estate investment opportunities in California have become an exciting concept for international buyers. That's why the joint effort between our two companies should be extremely lucrative and mutually beneficial."

In this joint operating agreement, Coldwell Banker will provide the real estate expertise, with its relocation network coordinating the transactions. Citibank International Asian Banking Center will act as an overseas bridge, making sure that everything is executed properly and in a timely manner. According to Dober, "With Citibank International's immense client base — plus the vast network of Coldwell Bankers offices and resources — together we will be able to provide a comprehensive package to overseas buyers." The benefits of the program are twofold: international buyers will receive home finding services, financing, tax filing help and property management assistance, while Coldwell Banker sellers will receive added exposure due to a large buyer pool. Through the extensive network of Coldwell Banker residential sales offices in California and the nation, together with Citibank International's immense client base in Asia, homes listed by Coldwell Banker will reach a virtually unlimited number of qualified buyers.

Coldwell Banker was founded in 1906. Its Residential Group operates companies that supply a complete range of residential real estate services, including brokerage, financing, title, escrow and relocation. There are more than 2100 company-owned offices with more than 38,000 sales associates nationwide. Coldwell Banker is a member of the Sears Financial Network. For additional information, call Coldwell Banker Residential Services at 800-327-9923 within California, and 800-343-8507 outside California.

Arts festival explodes at Oakland's waterfront

Oakland Festival of the Arts' annual Arts Explosion, a three-day weekend celebration featuring the East Bay's artistic talents and many artists, will continue through a close Sept. 3 from noon to 9 p.m. and Sept. 4 from noon to 6 p.m. at Estuary Park, at Embarcadero on Oakland's waterfront.

Labor Day Weekend

Admission to Arts Explosion is free for adults; $2 for seniors and $1 for children under 12. Free parking is available at Embarcadero and Alice Street. Arts Explosion can be reached via AC Transit line No. 11 to Second and Broadway and by the Questuary Water Taxi from the foot of Broadway at Jack London's Waterfront.

Arts Explosion is an event where families can watch artists paint, talk to artists and writers, hear storytellers, try their hand at arts and crafts, relax and listen to the finest blues, Cajun, Latin and jazz music. There will be non-stop entertainment on the Main Stage, in the Pavilion, Waterfront Amphitheater and Coffee Garden and roving throughout Estuary Park.

This year's Arts Explosion will include nationally-known musicians Charles Brown and his band with special guest Clifford Brown; Bobby Reed and Skunk featuring Sarah Levinson; Paramount Singers and Danny Heartsman's Night Feast on Sunday; and the Pete Escovedo Orchestra, ROVA Saxophone Quartet with San Francisco Taiko Dojo and the Ed Kelly Ensemble featuring Pharoah Sanders on Monday.

Arts Explosion will bring together a wealth of East Bay visual artists whose work will be exhibited and who will give art demonstrations encouraging audience participation. Children's festivities (including face painting, arts and crafts, giant bubbles, puppet shows, sing-alongs and story-telling), international food booths, poetry readings and other activities will be featured throughout the two-day event.

East Bay arts organizations will set up information tables along Arts Row. Small press books will be sold. A fireworks display sponsored by the Port of Oakland will illuminate the sky above Estuary Park at 8:45 p.m. on Sunday.

Arts Explosion weekend will kick off with a historic ceremony welcoming the return of the SS Potomac to the Port of Oakland at noon, Sept. 3 at Jack London's Waterfront at the foot of Broadway. The Potomac, which served as President Franklin Roosevelt's "Floating White House" from 1936 to 1946, was purchased by the Port of Oakland in 1981 and is being restored as the only memorial to a U.S. president on the West Coast. The homecoming ceremony, with FDR's son James Roosevelt as special guest, will follow a boat parade that will escort the Potomac to its permanent pier at Jack London's Waterfront.

The Jeremiah O'Brien, the only

Pete Escovedo Orchestra will play on Sunday operative World War II "Liberty Ship," will offer a bay tour leaving Oakland at 8:30 a.m., joining the boat parade in San Francisco and returning to Oakland by 11:30 a.m.

Oakland Festival of the Arts' second annual Arts Explosion Exhibition, showcasing a range of contemporary painting and sculpture by East Bay artists, will also open Sept. 3 for a month (closing Oct. 3) at The Pavilion in the center of Jack London's Waterfront, Oakland.

Exhibition hours will be noon to 7 p.m., Tuesdays through Thursdays.

Arts Explosion is presented in association with the City of Oakland and the Oakland Arts Council with a grant through the Oakland Redevelopment Agency. Partial support is also provided with grants from the California Arts Council and the Alameda County Arts Commission.

ALI'S. The beauty, grace and elegance of North Africa and the Middle East can be found at the newly opened Ali's in Kensington. The incredible interior design is only an introduction to this culinary cultural experience that can be described as Moroccan Romantic.

Opened just a month ago, the menu boasts the finest in cuisines from Tunisia, Algiers, Morocco and the Middle East. Meals begin with a beautiful assortment of Mezza which can include: harira, a traditional soup, pil pil, sauteed prawns with fresh herbs and tomatoes; and bechaya, ground lean lamb, seasoned with spices and served raw like steak tartare, with pita bread.

GERTIE'S CHESAPEAKE BAY CAFE

The finest East Coast styled seafood is being served seven days a week at Gertie's in a quiet, non-rushed atmosphere. A superb selection of fresh Maryland crab — enough to make any Easterner homesick — and a blend of foods from California and Louisiana offer the diner a wide selection of entrees, appetizers and desserts.

Seafood being my favorite, I intensely enjoyed the Eastern clam chowder consisting of a very large bowl of clams in a white wine, garlic and butter as an appetizer. My entree of crab cakes with its ginger and black pepper seasoning was superb.

Gertie's is not the typical California cuisine restaurant; be advised that the food is unique in taste because it is prepared in the manner of other regions of the country; but if you are interested in new experiences, you will not be disappointed.

A special night to remember is Tuesday for the clambake dinner that includes steamed clams and mussels, one and one half pound Maine lobster, a house salad and strawberry shortcake — a special night in Gertie's.

Gertie's is located at 1919 Addison St. in Berkeley and is open for lunch Monday through Friday 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., for brunch on Saturday 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. and for dinner Monday through Thursday 5:30 to 11 p.m., Friday and Saturday 5:30 to 11 p.m. and Sunday 4:30 to 11 p.m. For reservations please phone 841-CRAB.

CHEZ OLIVIER

Located on Piedmont Avenue in Oakland, Chez Olivier is an authentic neighborhood gourmet restaurant. Chef and co-owner, Teresa Perkins, along with lunch chef Rick Way, have created an imaginative blend of French-influenced California cuisine.

Opened almost three years ago by Olivier de Bodi, the restaurant has a loyal local following who enjoy sitting at pink and white linen covered tables listening to classical music while being served poulet au parmesan, filet mignon au poivre vert and saumon chef Therese.

The lunch menu includes fresh pastas, crepes and several inspired salads. The salade bruxelloise consists of poached chicken breast in white wine with garlic and herbs, mixed greens, fresh asparagus, tomato and cucumber. A wonderful salad by any standard.

Chez Olivier is located at 4027 Piedmont Ave. in Oakland and serving lunch Tuesday through Saturday 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.; dinner Tuesday through Thursday 5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. There is ample public parking directly behind this well known word of mouth restaurant.

Innovative new pacemaker allows wearers active lives

The Food and Drug Administration has granted approval for the use of the META MV heart pacemaker, one of two innovative pacing devices available at Merritt Peralta Medical Center.

Both the META and a similar device, the Synergyst II, represent milestones in the technological development of pacemakers, each with new features that will enable pacemaker users to live more actively than was possible with older models.

"Pacemakers make a tremendous impact on the lives of patients who would otherwise be disabled," says cardiac surgeon Dr. Leigh Iverson, Division Chief of Cardiac & Thoracic Services at Merritt Peralta. "With this technology, people can return to totally normal lives."

The first pacemakers were capable of generating a pulse in only one of the heart's two chambers, usually the ventricle. In addition, the pacemakers' fixed rates of about 70 beats per minute were physically restrictive for their users; just walking up a flight of stairs could prove too strenuous for the heart.

The first rate-responsive pacemakers, capable of measuring a person's level of physical activity and causing the heart to respond with an appropriate heart rate, were introduced in 1984. With a pulse range as low as 50 bpm and as high as 170 bpm, pacemaker users were able to return to their normal activities.

Both the META and the Synergyst II have unique sensors to determine the level of physical activity. The Synergyst uses a motion detector, increasing heart rate with an increase in body motion.

The META is the first to measure minute volume — the amount of air the individual breathes in one minute — as the indicator of required heart rate. During activities that involve little upper body movement, such as bicycling, minute volume is a more accurate indicator of activity level than a motion detector, which is most sensitive to motion in the upper body, where it is worn.

The Synergyst detects body motion through a piezoelectric ceramic crystal bonded to the inside of the pacemaker container. When this sensitive crystal is bent or stressed only a few millionths of an inch by pressure waves from body activity, it produces a small electrical current that signals the pacemaker to match the heart rate to the level of physical exertion.

The Synergyst II, currently under FDA clinical investigation, has the added feature of dual-chambered pacing, signaling the heartbeat in both the atrium and the ventricle. For some pacemaker users, this recently developed technology for a quenced beat alleviates "pacemaker syndrome," a feeling of fatigue caused by inadequate blood circulation.

Pacemakers are often used in patients suffering from dizziness and blackouts, resulting when the heart's natural pacemaker, the sinus node, fails to function properly or when its signals are blocked from reaching the chamber in the heart. The pacemaker can either function as a substitute for the sinus node, or as a "detour" around the blockage between chambers.

Except for the initial implantation in patients' chests, both the META MV and the Synergyst can be "fine tuned" without surgery, using something like remote control.

Successful program helps smokers qu

An "I Quit" clinic to help smokers abandon cigarettes will be sponsored by the American Cancer Society in Richmond.

The clinic meets from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. continuing for six sessions. Led by an ex-smoker who volunteers for the ACS, the clinic has established a 40 percent cure rate.

The clinic starts Sept. 11 at Kaiser Hospital, 1330 Cutting

Bldv., Richmond. A $20 donation to cover cost of materials is requested. Interested smokers register in advance or attend the first meeting. For information call 525-6801.

RAIDERMANIA

They're big, they're bad ... and they're just the fans ...

By Chris Treadway
The Journal

There were enough skulls and crossbones and silver-and-black garbed people Saturday at the Oakland Coliseum to give the place the appearance of a convention of motorcycle gangs.

In the parking lot, beer flowed as freely as water through a break in the Peripheral Canal. Families leaving the afternoon performance of the Ringling Bros. Circus at the Arena were bewildered by the spectacle outside.

The real circus was at the stadium, where 50,642 celebrants greeted eight years of pent-up emotions at the one-day return of the Raiders from Los Angeles.

The centerpiece of all the hoopla was a football game between the Los Angeles Raiders, the team that abandoned Oakland after the 1981 season, and the Houston Oilers. For the record, the Raiders lost 23-21 on a Houston touchdown with three seconds to play.

But the game was secondary to fans bent on proving to Raider owner Al Davis, the cities of Sacramento and Los Angeles and any other observers that the East Bay wanted the Raiders back in Oakland.

"It's just like the old days, but they're sure a lot more boisterous," said Dan Wong, a 20-year usher at the Coliseum. "We're not equipped to handle all this extra emotion."

Wong said the crowd noise was louder than any rock concert he had ushered. He said he would like to see the team return to Oakland, but added "it's a lot more work."

A vendor for the stadium food service said the crowd was the rowdiest he had seen since a heavy metal rock concert last year. "The Poison and White Snake concert was worse," said the employee, who requested anonymity, "but tonight comes close."

Abe Souza, the 89-year-old peanut vendor who has been a fixture at Bay Area events for more than 40 years, said he hopes the team comes back.

"I got a lot of good people here," said Souza, whose 90th birthday was three days away. "I worked the games before they came here, down by the Oakland Auditorium (at Frank Youell Field)."

Chuck Jones, Tom Mitchell and David Prandi at last week's game

Guitarist Carlos Santana, who performed the national anthem, was among those caught up in the emotion of the event.

"You can't pay (movie) extras to behave like this," he said. "That's the spirit of Oakland. Oakland is alive."

Even though a decision on the Raiders' future home is not expected for at least two weeks, Santana seemed assured of what the choice would be.

"I know they'll come back," he said. "If they stay away from here they'll lose their guts. That's what Oakland is about is guts, not paper mache."

An Oakland police officer said he had been unable to see a single play of the game. "I'm too busy trying to keep the crowd quiet," he said before running off to deal with an unruly patron.

The emotion of the nostalgia-fest did not go unnoticed by players on the Raiders, the team that left Oakland in 1981 for supposedly greener pastures.

"It just reminded me of when we played here every week," said linebacker Matt Millen, one of three players remaining from the '81 Oakland team. "It's something I wish would happen every week. It never surprised me. I know the kind of fans Oakland has."

But on the night of their homecoming, the Raiders could not muster the magic of their glory days in Oakland.

The Coliseum erupted in celebration when Los Angeles scored with 5:05 left in the game to take a 21-16 lead. But the Oilers came back to score the winning touchdown with three seconds to play, prompting a woman in a black Raider t-shirt to yell "They're still L.A.," as she got up to leave.

Power hitter takes a swing at Laney

Albany's Craig Tannahill takes impressive record with him

By Don August

The Journal

He stands in the batter's box, a menacing 6' 2" and 190 pounds. He's the latest in a string of power hitters to come out of Albany High School and he has all the tools to make baseball his calling. Craig Tannahill is hoping to make a name for himself on the college ball field.

Tannahill is ready to embark on his first season as a player at Laney Junior College, and as he does, the Albany program bids a fond farewell to the second Tannahill to leave the program in the past five years. (His older brother Kevin was drafted by the Milwaukee Brewers.)

The latest Tannahill to work his way through the ranks of Albany Little League, high school and Legion, will leave behind his share of success on the home ball fields which started when he was 8.

'I expect him to be one of the best. He's an excellent hitter with a strong arm and (he's) an intense student'

—Laney Manager Tom Pearse

"My family was always sports oriented. My brother and his friends were playing baseball and it sounded like fun," he said.

So off he went to begin a career of his own and his numbers were always impressive. Through Albany Little League he played for the Indians, Cubs and Mets, finishing first place three times and near the top a few others. It was his first year of high school that Tannahill gave baseball a serious thought.

"I started the first few games at the junior varsity level and then the coach (John Goelz) brought me up to varsity and I mainly pinch hit."

Any questions he had were answered that year when he hit .411. When Bob Allegretti took the team the next year, Tannahill was a starter. He slipped down to average that season, hitting .300 but when his junior season came up, he was again in top form.

Another coach took the team that year — John Peyovich — who had brought Tannahill up through the little league ranks. Tannahill clobbered the competition with a blistering .486 batting average.

Under Phil Wanlin in his senior year he stroked the ball for another .411 season.

During his sophomore and junior years he also wrestled, which he credits for building his conditioning.

"Baseball is a team effort but wrestling is more on one and it really toughens you up," he said. "For physical toughness, wrestling makes you push yourself to your limit."

At the time high school ball was on, Tannahill was taken by the Albany Legion again, a year earlier, and it was another challenge for him.

"It's good to play with the best players in the area. I did real well and it helped my confidence."

In his latest Legion season, he hit .343 and led the team with 31 runs batted in while playing stellar left field. Then last year came his biggest challenge and he wasn't able to answer the bell. After attending Laney and making a strong push at the starting left field job, he broke his thumb diving for a ball and was withdrawn after just one game. But he didn't let it get to him.

"The coach red-shirted me (made him ineligible) but I think that was the best thing that could have happened. I'll be a year older when I start as a freshman. Also I'll know the system better and more about the environment."

"I figured Laney was the best junior college around and playing with the best players in the area, if I could hang and play competitively with them, I could go on. Playing with the best lets you know where you stand."

Another reason he chose Laney was because of the coaching staff, manager Tom Pearse and coaches John Martinez and Mike Trainer. "They care about education and try to make you grow as a person as well as a ball player," Tannahill said. "The program under those coaches makes you mentally tougher than before."

Pearse's comments on Tannahill were equally flattering. "He's a very good ball player and has improved a lot. I expect him to be one of the best (on the team). He's an excellent hitter with a strong arm and an intense student," said Pearse.

As for the future, Tannahill's mind is set on this season. "At Laney I'm looking forward to playing every game. I want to be in that clutch situation, that tight spot."

And after that? "Education comes first. Hopefully I can get picked up by a good Division I school and if I'm drafted I'll make a decision."

The city of Albany is waiting for that, too.

Pete Rose cards could slump, then take off

Bay Area baseball card dealers say the life suspension of Pete Rose from baseball by Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti will probably have little effect on the price of his cards.

Doug Sprague of Dave's Dougout in Albany said the suspension will probably have no long-term effect on prices although prices may dip temporarily.

A Topps Chewing Gum Co. card of Pete Rose from 1963 — his rookie year with the Cincinnati Reds — is selling for $625, according to the latest Beckett's price guide, the bible for card dealerships. Rose cards from the later 1960s and early '70s sell for $40 and up.

Cards of players who are elected to the Hall of Fame usually increase dramatically in price.

Rose and Giamatti reached an agreement last week calling for the Cincinnati manager to be suspended indefinitely from baseball for betting on games. Rose may apply for reinstatement after one year.

Sprague said he would like to see Rose come clean and admit to a gambling problem, adding that it is probably the only way he will be reinstated.

"No one wants to see his image tarnished and his card prices go down," he said. "He didn't kill anyone or do drugs. Everybody gambles."

Paradoxically, the publicity generated by the Rose controversy could cause his cards to soar in value.

"That's the way the card market is," Sprague said. "It's a funny business."

Bob Machon of Papa's Sports Cards in Menlo Park says he will continue to buy Rose cards although he conceded sales may be stagnant for a while. Machon is confident that the man who broke Ty Cobb's all-time record for base hits will rebound in the public eye.

"People tend to embrace baseball's bad boys over the long term," he said.

A Brechtean 'Measure' in park

Stellar performances at Berkeley Shakespeare

Stage

Measure for Measure, produced by the Berkeley Shakespeare Festival, runs through Sept. 16 at John Hinkel Park in Berkeley, 525-8844.

The Vienna in which director Richard E. T. White has set Measure for Measure in his current Berkeley Shakespeare Festival production is a post-World War II city.

Here graffiti festoon the gray walls of its prisons, and the military uniforms of the ruling class contrast with the rags of the city's beggars and the plumage of its prostitutes.

In fact, the style of White's production — which opened at John Hinkel Park in Berkeley recently — with its songs that disrupt the action and its political banners on the stage, owes as much to Bertolt Brecht and his theater of "alienation" as to William Shakespeare and his conception of romantic comedy.

But rather than uneasily grafting Brecht onto Shakespeare — as so many "modernizations" of Shakespeare's opus do — White's conception grows organically from the play itself.

A duke, uneasy with his position and the moral laxity plaguing his kingdom, absents himself, leaving his realm in the hands of a subordinate known for his moral absolutism. In fact, however, this Angelo is a hypocrite, relying on the appearances of uprightness and absolute faith in the power of law to mask weaknesses and carnal faults within himself. And, as portrayed by John Bellucci, Angelo is wracked by this conflict which surfaces in the contrast between his features and his ramrod bearing.

As the permutations of this troubling comedy unfold, the issues of law and morality constantly surface: How can the law be followed to the letter when common human weakness counsels a more pliant perspective on right and wrong? How can a sister, albeit pious, place her own abstract sense of virtue over her brother's life?

Given the contours of Shakespeare's comedy, the answer is, as always, an assertion of the life-affirming and the human, effected in this case by the return of the duke, marriages, and the righting of all wrongs.

But White's production does not avoid the more complex aspects of the play, including the uneasy betrothal of the duke and Isabella at the play's conclusion.

The cast in this last outdoor production of the company's season is stellar, with Julian Lopez-Morillas as the cerebral, somewhat lax duke; Robin Goodrin-Nordli as Isabella, whose moral rigidity condemns her brother until saved by the duke's plot; and William McKerghan as Escalus, the sage advisor. Shabaka and Peter A. Jacobs make the roles of Lucio and Pompey respectively, comic gems.

Barbara Mesney's set makes effective use of the multi-level space (the executioner's chamber is especially good) and Barbara Bush's costumes strongly suggest a disintegrating society.

This Measure for Measure does not neglect any aspect of Shakespeare's play, developing each for a most memorable production. It will continue in rotating repertory through Sept. 16 at John Hinkel Park in Berkeley.

Luxury cars latest frontier Japanese enter market

The leaders in luxury automobiles have jumped, kangaroo style, through international boundaries, as new players have taken possession of the land.

At different times the French, Italians, British, Germans and Americans have all led the luxury automobile industry, but in automotive history the order has been reshuffled many times. In the recent post-war past, it was only the British and the Germans who have represented the real contenders in the luxury market.

The Japanese have eyed this market with great interest, but have never really tried to penetrate its confines. That was until 1989, when Toyota announced the Lexus and Nissan as their special luxury Infinity lines.

Both are U.S. models only and are aimed straight at the American territories of Mercedes and BMW — California, Chicago and New York.

The California marketplace can really make or break the introduction of a new product line.

Lexus is hoping for a flow-over buyers from the top end of luxury sales to blend with a strong shift in buyer preference from the Germanic competition.

From the early testing in the American press it was obvious that Lexus was on track. They called a "short lead" press introduction for the California automotive press at Laguna Seca last week.

We were given the usual technical rundown but there was much to see and learn. They had spent six years designing the Lexus line and many of its features surprised even the hardened veterans of the press trips.

Part of the press presentation was the new weldable double-layer sheet metal which is laminated with a plastic layer, much like a laminated windshield. This new product is used to form a sound deadening barrier around the engine compartment.

Auto Scene

David Fetherston

Other new technology includes a traction control system which uses electronics to split the delivery of the power to the rear wheels.

It offers 80 percent of the traction capability of a four wheel drive system without the need for power to all four wheels.

Lexus admits buying all the competitors' cars over the past six years and closely studying them piece by piece. This homework has paid off handsomely with a pair of attractive luxury sedans.

The Lexus line has two four-door models — the ES 250 and LS 400. The ES 250 is based on the Acura upscale Integra and the LS 400 is completely new. A two-door LS 400 is due in the spring of 1991.

The ES 250, while a fine level of equipment, is not the great news of the Lexus line. It is powered by a special 24 valve V6 driving the front wheels, and has all the refinement that one would expect to find in an up-line yuppie sedan.

Even with its optimum creature comforts and seemingly high tune V6, its 0 to 60 mph times were disappointingly slow at 13.6 seconds.

The LS 400 on the other hand is the "real catch of the day." Lexus has "genetically" engineered the new LS 400 through design and adaptation of ideas. The result is a new generation of luxury automobiles.

The interior has a pleasant appearance but one that has been heavily influenced by the

The 1989 Jaguar Vanden Plas Majestic.

The Jaguar XJ-S collection Rouge.

European vehicles from which its concept came.

The body styling is a little on the bland side but maybe that's a plus. Not everyone who drives a luxury automobile wants to holler, "Look what I own!"

The Lexus line should have no trouble establishing itself immediately as a new contender against the entrenched owners of the marketplace, BMW and Mercedes. Its competitors are much more expensive: the Mercedes 420 SEL runs close to $60,000, the Jaguar XJ-6 carries a price tag of $50,000 and the 735i BMW prices out at $53,000. The LS 400 is priced in the mid-$35,000 range.

Powering the LS 400 is a new four-liter 32 valve four cam V8. It delivers 250 horsepower block, cylinder heads and oil pan. The V8 is decked out with all the latest electronic engine management and design must-haves.

The V8 is attached to a four-speed automatic electronically controlled transmission (ECT-I) which is fully integrated into the engine management computer. Its brain tells the engine computer to retard ignition timing.

This reduces engine torque, lessening the loads on the transmission during shifts and delivering a smooth shifting pattern.

The suspension is a textbook design. It uses high caster Vorlauf geometry with a small king-pin offset, hydraulic struts, bar cushions, pillow ball control arm bushings and low pressure gas-filled shocks.

Front and rear sway bars are also standard on this coil spring suspension.

Air suspension is an option and comes with Ride Control. Top speed for the LS 400 is reportedly 150 mph.

We didn't get a chance to "try for the sky" on the track but we did get to run with one of the Jim Russell Racing School's instructors on board.

For the first few laps I drove the Lexus LS 400 as badly as I could. I wanted to see how graciously the Lexus would forgive my stumblings. Its surefooted suspension is matched in a combination of standard ABS brakes and special Goodyear Eagle GAs.

The next few laps were more professional with brisk runs up the mini mountain at Laguna Seca. The Lexus delivered a fine and well-balanced handling package that offers a nice sporty edge.

The V8 also offers a brisk 0 to 60 mph time at 7.9 seconds, much faster than its smaller ES 250 brother.

Not surprisingly the LS 400 is very quiet inside. Its cd figure is 0.29 and, with its special laminated steel surface, the interior noise level is virtually unnoticeable.

Only under full acceleration did the four V8 intrude. The rest of the time I had to check the tachometer to make sure it was still alive.

The Lexus is going to be a winner. Its turn of speed, agility and silent travel confines are sure to make it a popular new product for the up-line buyer. Lexus hopes to sell 70,000 units in the U.S. during 1990, a big number for a new company. But remember, Acura started only two years ago and is already selling in excess of 120,000 automobiles a year.

"Roll over Beethoven" — there is a new player on the stage and he seems to know some very fine tunes. Lexus is here to play the piper in New York, Chicago and California. After that, the world's its oyster and a fat one it will be.

Hatchback wins Choice Award

Chevrolet's Corsica LT hatchback has won a "Drivers' Choice Award" from "MotorWeek 89", Television's automotive magazine.

Chosen out of all the vehicles in the world, the Corsica LT was designated the benchmark vehicle in its 5-door hatchback class.

"There isn't anything else available to the buyer that offers the combination of price, interior size, utility and performance that the Chevrolet Corsica LT hatchback offers," says John Davis, the show's host and executive producer.

Winners of Drivers' Choice awards are chosen by members of MotorWeek 89's staff, and are selected using both qualitative and quantitative factors.

Quantitative factors include a price-value comparison and standardized track tests including acceleration, braking and high and low speed handling. The quantitative factors are designed to demonstrate that the vehicle is above average in its class.

The entire MotorWeek staff also evaluates the driving characteristics of each vehicle and each person decides whether he or she would like to live with the vehicle daily.

According to Davis, the result is a list of vehicles consumers should find helpful in shopping for a vehicle in a particular class.
